CITY PAGES COLLEGE CITY GUIDE

Your Unofficial Guide to College in the Twin Cities

By: Gabriella Granada

I was certain of two things when I moved to the Twin Cities for college: (1) I wanted to go to a big school in the Midwest, but (2) I wasn't willing to live in corn fields for four years. That narrowed it down pretty quickly. I took a while to warm up to Minneapolis both literally and figuratively; it was too cold, too spread out, and everyone here used expressions like "ope!" and "uffda!" But the Twin Cities grew on me, and now driving across the river on I-35W and passing the skyline feels familiar and comforting, like coming home.

The Twin Cities is the hidden gem of the Midwest. From bike paths to breweries to music venues to museums, it really is a choose-your-own-adventure place, and this City Pages College City Guide is designed to help you do just that.

WAYS TO MAKE QUICK CASH

It's no secret that you will be strapped for cash in college, and there are only so many creative ways to spice up a 30-cent package of ramen. Here are some side hustles that will make you a quick buck:

Consignment Shops

Sell that bag of clothes in the corner of your closet that you've been meaning to get rid of. Take advantage of the many great thrift stores in the Twin Cities like Gina + Will, Buffalo Exchange, or Rewind. Caution: you will need to exhibit restraint and refrain from spending the money you've just made on even more clothes while you're there.

Mobile Marketplaces

Want to curate and sell items from your closet from the comfort of your dorm? Download clothing resale apps like Poshmark or Depop and start selling!

Dog Walking

Download a dog walking app like Rover or Wag and get paid to hang out with people's furry friends.

TRAVEL THE TWIN CITIES ON A BUDGET

One if by Bus

The bus system here isn't the most reliable, but the unpredictability of when and if the 6U comes is what keeps the magic alive. Also, it's affordable and a much more attractive option than walking when it hits sub zero in the winter.

Two if by Light Rail

This is another form of transit where that UPass will come in handy. Take advantage of the Light Rail. The Green Line cuts through campus and takes you to St. Paul. The Blue Line takes you to Minnehaha Falls, Mall of America, and, if you leave early enough, it'll take you right to the airport, saving you big bucks on that Lyft.

Three if by Electric Scooter

Another option is to give in to the trend (you know you want to) and download one of the many scooter apps available in the Twin Cities. If men in expensive suits can scooter around downtown during the work week, you can, too. They're a surprisingly cheap and effective way to get around.

ADVERTORIAL

NOTHING BUT HEMP

Catch onto the CBD craze in time for college

The dog days are drawing to a close, the Minnesota State Fair is nigh and pretty soon a new crop of students will be filling dorm halls and quads for studies and more than a little fun.

Whether they want to ace classes in a new and challenging environment or maintain a proper eye on mental health, many students across the state should consider CBD products this semester. Thousands of ordinary adults in the U.S. find the non-psychoactive marijuana relative helpful for their focus, insomnia and anxiety.

Preliminary studies have borne out some of the science behind these testimonials based on the compounds interactions with the body's endocannabinoid system, or ECS.

More research is needed to be conclusive, but CBD offers many of the relaxing benefits of marijuana without the mind-altering high.

Getting to sleep with a new, snoring roommate may be a bit easier after a few drops of CBD oil, and many people use it to ease headaches after a hangover, too.

For a large population of college students who haven't been exposed to marijuana before and who might feel pressured in the new campus environment, CBD offers a solution to help relax and focus on academics and extra curricular commitments without feeling pressured.

There are plenty of other reasons for students to try out hemp and CBD products. Student athletes, for instance, may find CBD's anti-inflammatory properties for pain relief during rest periods. Sports with high impact joint stresses, like basketball, are prime examples where CBD is advised.

If you are interested in starting your semester right with CBD but have more questions, visit a Nothing But Hemp location near you to get more info and award-winning, industry-leading products. Nothing But Hemp has locations in Uptown Minneapolis, on Grand Avenue in St. Paul and a spattering of other locations across the state.
